Cracking Adobe Photoshop is a bit more involved, but it can be done. First, you'll need to download a program called a keygen. This is a program that will generate a valid serial number for you, so that you can activate the full version of the software without having to pay for it. After the keygen is downloaded, run it and generate a valid serial number. Then, launch Adobe Photoshop and enter the serial number. You should now have a fully functional version of the software. Just remember, cracking software is illegal and punishable by law, so use it at your own risk.

The good news is that all your efforts are important, and the feeling of accomplishment remains as strong as ever. The bad news is that even as your work becomes more refined—and potentially more polished than ever before—it's easier than ever to screw up and not know it. Photoshop's tools are so powerful that any compromise (regardless of how small) will produce matte-looking results instead of the expected high-key results. You must be careful when using the Healing Brush tool, as the results can overwrite some or all of the original image. You may accidentally transform the image to look like a woodblock or ichthyoid<sup>1/2</sup> format, instead of realistic skin tones. Even the Single Photo Layer function can produce muddy results. You must specify the Destination Location even when you "Save for Web," which makes it easier for the importing application to resize the image and give it the proper text and background color. An image you open in Photoshop will look great and save when it's converted to Photoshop's native file format. However, text and background colors may not be correctly specified, so the image will look sloppy when viewed in the importing application. There's nothing more distracting and time-consuming to a client than opening a project and finding out that a click of the Cancel button removed the entire image (including the unprinted photography). While you may have an important reason for canceling—for example, the client got cold feet or you ran out of time—the best default practise is to not have an empty project if you have nothing to replace it.
