I'm a British guy living in London at the moment, but as the wife and I have settled into our new urban life, we have come to love the Park Blocks as one of our favourite hangouts. You can find us on the Leavenworth Street side most evenings, sitting and watching life go by, talking with friends and playing with the kids. Some evenings the park is the setting for a good Indian meal (particularly if it is curry weather!). On other evenings, we take a stroll into St. Johns for a beer, or down to some of the bars along the river. It's a great place to be, and now it will be even better for the vast majority of the citizens of Portland. Sorensen Developments has bought the whole block between St. John's and Duniway and wants to build 500 condominiums. These properties, along with some others in the neighborhood, will be a part of the city's Fairview neighborhood which will go a long way to revitalizing the area and bringing more residents, and visitors, to one of the best parts of Portland. This is a rare instance of a government giving power to private citizens in
